Fr. Ben Daghir's Corner

Brandon Vogt in his book "RETURN" discusses five mistakes that will almost certainly keep someone away from the faith. I would like to share these five mistakes.

1. Don't force the person to go to Mass. Vogt is specifically talking about older children and young adults (let's say 13-25 years old). The Church, along with families, must always propose and not impose. This is a key principle. Forcing, shoving, etc. is nonsense.
2. Don't criticize the lifestyle of the person. This approach doesn't work in any facet of life. It also doesn't work with regards to bringing someone back to Church. For anyone who has ever been criticized for not going to Church, I extend my apology to you as a Roman Catholic priest.
3. Don't nag the person. There's a phrase, "wrong time, wrong place." The topic of a loved one not attending Catholic Mass is a delicate issue. The constant harping and nagging on an individual is always "wrong time, wrong place." The right time, right place must be authentic, profound, non-threatening, and utterly genuine.
4. Don't dismiss the person's objections to the faith. Objections to the Catholic faith are not a bad thing. This means that a discussion can emerge. Allow for the person to express himself/herself. Allow for statements to be made. Listen first, let them talk. Consider providing a resource for them to look into. Let them keep searching. Be patient.
5. Don't assume you can change the person. Humility is key, first and foremost. We must know our small, yet important role in light of God's providence. It's through grace that a person is brought back to the faith. It's never "Well I did that and then I did this and then I tried that and then "Billy" came back to Church." Nonsense. We must allow for the Holy Spirit to work far beyond what we may know and imagine.

These are the five mistakes that keep people away from the faith. You know what five things attract people to the Catholic faith?

Joy. Humility. Courage. Love. Friendship.

Assumption - Farewell for Deacon Steve

Sunday, May 14, Coffee & Donuts after 8 a.m. Mass

Deacon Steve officially retires the weekend of May 13-14, from active ministry as a deacon. He's still a deacon. However, he will not minister on a regular basis as he has been doing in Sykesville and Reynoldsville for the past two years, and in Brookville for several years prior to being assigned to Assumption and St. Mary's Churches. Steve, we are grateful for your years of diaconal ministry and for our two parishes. We wish you well as you retire and now can spend more time with your wife Ruth and be free to travel to their families in North Carolina and Texas. You will be missed, and we hope you will come back to see us when you are able. May you continue to enjoy God's blessings of grace and peace in your life.
